IN RE Apple Inc. Securities Litigation
Case No. C.06.5208JF

I would like to object to the Plan of Allocation for the Settlement of this case.

Options transactions in this security have been excluded from participation in the Settlement without providing any reason. Indeed such transactions are essentially no different than the transactions in the underlying security, exposing the purchaser or the seller to the same risks and obligations. It is unreasonable and unfair to have them excluded.

Furthermore, item 52.a. excludes those who purchased and sold Apple shares during the Class Period. Is such a person any less affected than those who held the stock beyond the Class Period? This simply defies logic.

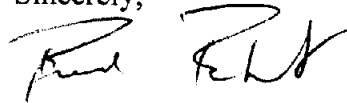

I believe this Plan of Allocation is defective and should be rejected in entirety.

I am a member of the Class by the virtue of Purchase of 200 shares of Apple on 3/18/2005. I also have Options transactions during the Class Period.

If my objections are sustained it is a clear indication of errors and omissions by the Counsel and they should be barred from any compensation in fees or expenses to correct this problem.

Sincerely,
